Author: Irene me and a friend of mine have made a copy of the standard Dnd 5e character sheet in google sheets. We've been using it for character creation since, because all math is done automatically, and we were using google sheets to keep track of things like weight anyway. It has cut the time it took us to make a character (excluding personality and such) in half, so if anyone's interested, here is the sheet: Es wurde ein Browserfehler festgestellt. I've customized to thin the borders and add more space to the first page. Ok to post and reshare? Post your link here in this thread? Hey, I've been working with this sheet for a bit. For the life of my I cannot figure out where the formula for "skillprofs" is. Google sheets doesn't highlight named cells in formulas. Can ya help me out here? I need to edit the formula a little for something weird that came up in my game. Thanks! [MENTION=6985105]Jeremy Medders/[MENTION], do you want the proficiency bonus or the 1 have 7 in Stealth bonus? If you click at the proficiency square you can use the formula it has there. Then you can add DexMod for Stealth or whatever. [MENTION=6985105]Jeremy Medders/[MENTION], SkillProfs is a table on the hidden Data sheet. You can find the location of named cells by going to the menu item Data, and from there opening Named Ranges. That will give you the full list of Named Ranges, and what they refer to. Updated link with better instructions.
